ber 4.

COURT NEWS

Commissioner's Office.
After the allowance of sheep claims on the last quarter of the tax year, in their June session the county commissioners allowed the last claims against the dog fund, which left a balance of about $900. The statutes in this case made provides that any balance remaining in the fund in excess of $500, shall be paid to the society for prevention of cruelty to children and animals, if there be such an organization in the county, and the school fund. But owing to the fact that three persons have been sent to the Pasture Institute at Chicago for treatment, there probably will be no balance in excess of $500.

Feeding Human Stoves
in Hot Weather

Meat produces heat. It is all right in winter, but the more you eat now the more you will feel the hot weather.

These are Mapl-Flake days. Here you get the maximum nourishment and the minimum heat.

A great deal of food, as you know, goes toward producing heat.
Fat foods are heating; lean meat is heating. But whole wheat is not.
At least one meal a day, in this weather, should consist solely of Mapl-Flake and fruit.

Don't expect other cereal foods to take the place of Mapl-Flake, for they cannot.

Mapl-Flake is the one food that's all food, because it all digests.

We spend 96 hours in preparing it—four times as long as we need spend.

We steam-cook it for six hours—
cure it for days—toast it in ovens at 400 degrees.

All this is done to separate the starch particles so the digestive juices can get to them.

Every food specialist knows that this is essential. So do the makers who don't do it.

One must choose between making a food cheaply and making it right. We choose to make it right.

And our choice will be your choice after you know.

Mapl-Flake

The Food with the Maple Flavor

We shall always have food fads that last for a little time. But wheat in this form is enduring.
There will never be a better food prepared in a better way.
Never a food more enticing, for we cook Mapl-
Flake in pure maple syrup.
Children will beg for it after they get it once.
Please serve it to-morrow morning. Telephone your grocer now.
You surely want to serve the food that children
like best, when it's the best food for them.

THE OHIO CANAL

Much has been said of the condition and disposition of the canal lying within the city precincts and I have hesitated to propound by views to the readers of this paper, but as none have reached a solution of the vexed problem I will submit my plan.

Make a trunk sewer from the extreme western limit of the city to a point east where it can empty into the Licking river without any danger or damage to any one. Sink it deep enough below the bed of North Fork and Raccoon creeks, and you could sewer seven-eighths of the whole city.

NOMINATES JOHNSON

Hon. W. S. Hammond Places Governor's Name Before the Convention Last Night.

Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota was placed in nomination for president of the United States by the Hon. W. S. Hammond, who spoke as follows:

"From each of the great galaxy of commonwealths constituting the Union, come the delegates of an earnest and impatient people. Earnest in their determination that public wrongs shall be speedily righted, that corrupt practices shall cease and that civic righteousness shall prevail. Impatient at the policy of delay and postponement pursued by the political party now in control of all departments of the federal government and impatient at the frivolous excuses and apologies of the Republican party for its inaction and its neglect to perfect necessary legislation.

"The power to defeat progressive and reformatory measures favored by the great majority of the men of the land has been lodged in the hands of a coterie of reactionary politicians who exercise it to further partisan ends and to serve special interests, regardless alike of the needs of the nation and the demands of the people. Against this deliberate delay in the performance of public duty, against political corruption, against the entrenchments of lawless wealth and against the deliverance of the rights of the people and of their chosen representatives into the possession of a triumvirate out of sympathy with the people, the Democratic party sets its face and prepares for a mighty conflict. Again proclaiming for all, equality, for none, special favor, it enters upon the contest with the consciousness of being right and with the assurance of being victorious.

"Here in this beautiful city of the mountains have assembled the delegates who are to select the leader in this campaign of the people to recover their rights and privileges. Whatever dissensions there may be in our ranks, whatever differences of opinion may prevail, to be worthy of the task before us we must choose our leader with calmness and deliberation and when he is chosen we must follow him with zeal and with strength, mindful only of the great purposes we seek to accomplish. If there is one in our party great enough and good enough to be made our candidate, upon whom all within our ranks can agree and around whom no internal strife has raged, one who can better than any other unite all the factions and all the divisions of the Democratic party upon a platform enunciating the demands of the people and dedicated to them, it is wise and it is our duty to name him as our candidate.

"The great North Star State, midway between the two oceans and at the head of the great valley of the Mississippi, comes here with a message to deliver and a record to disclose. She has a son whom she loves and has signally honored and she can not better aid in the great work that lies before us than in offering to us as a leader that honored citizen of the state.

"Thousands upon thousands of the men and women of this country were born in other lands and under other flags. The opportunities to be found in this land, the broad principles upon which our form of government rests, the freedom of action and the security of life and property here attracted them irresistibly that they left the homes of their fathers and came to live with us, to play for the nation's welfare when there is peace and to fight for the nation's honor when there is war. They became Americans. It is of the son of such immigrants that I speak.

"They came with all the hope and with all the fear that is experienced by those who try the unknown. There was a new language to be acquired, new customs to be learned, a new life to be begun. They found a beautiful spot in the plain near the lakes and the forest, and there they built their little cot and underwent the struggles the pioneer immigrant so well understands. At the knee of his hard-working, noble-minded, God-serving mother, where he was taught to listen his evening prayer, her son first learned something of the character of this great nation, as she whispered to him her reasons for leaving far-away Sweden and taking up her home down by the trees and the river and the lakes.

"Deprived at an early age of the father's guiding hand, the mother and her little ones were obliged to make their way alone. Out of the depths of poverty have come some of the noblest souls the world has known. The hardships, the numerous trials, the weary struggle for the day's nourishment, raiment and shelter, leave an impress upon the character of him in whose life they come that can never be removed. The story of the poor and the interests of the common people appeal to him as they cannot to one who has not experienced the sorrows, the burden and the anxiety of poverty and want. The gross, the selfish, the callous and the indifferent are worn away by the grinding wheels of poverty, leaving but the refined, the gentle and tender nature, sensitive to the calls of distressed and unhappy humanity. Creatures of environment that we are, how great is the influence of our surroundings in those tender years when impressions are most readily made and most lastingly retained. In this uprising of the people let our leader be a man of the people, one who has risen from the depths and is by birth, by training and by nature truly a son of toil.

"When the boy grew older he read a few good books and in a quiet country village pondered over the great questions affecting the destiny of the state and of the nation. Once convinced that the government was beset by special interests seeking to obtain unholily profits from it, slaves of greed and selfishness, lovers of power and dominion, every patriotic impulse in the young man's breast impelled him to oppose and denounce these enemies of the public good. Believing that they sought shelter and protection at the hands of the Republican party and had to a large extent, through their agents and representatives, gained control of that party and of some of its recognized leaders, he attached himself to the minority party and labored in its ranks, without thought of office or preferment, and with voice and pen endeavored to bring home political truths to the people of his native state and to throw light upon the dark practices of unfaithful office holders and public servants.

"Four years ago the dominant political party in the State of Minnesota, flushed with a series of easy victories but not held together by devotion to any great living issue, found itself engaged in bitter factional quarrels. Great chieftains had arisen and their personal ambitions and their contests for political supremacy so engaged the attention of the adherents of the Republican party that encroachments upon the rights of the state were suffered to remain unchecked and the interests of the state were not vigilantly guarded. It was the time for a leader to appear, one who had the confidence of the people of the state, whose integrity was unquestioned, whose character was stainless, whose energy and ability were known; one who had made no factional enemies but who had always been loyal in the service of the state. From no one section, from no one faction, from no one class came the call for the man of the hour. It summoned from his modest office the publisher of a weekly paper and around him rallied the remnants of the Democratic party that had so often struggled in vain against the crushing force of Republican majorities. Renowned, inspired with the hope of victory, they followed this man and supported him. Not to honor him, not to gratify his ambitions, but to rescue a state from drowsy inaction, to energetic life. In that year President Roosevelt carried the state by a plurality greater than 100,000 but the Democratic governor was elected.

"Two years ago he was a candidate for re-election. His successful efforts in securing a reduction of transportation charges, his successful campaign against timber trespassers, his insurance reforms, his tireless struggles for faithful and efficient service in every department of the state government, and his frank and fearless manner of dealing with all questions and matters that came before him made him the trusted tribune of the common people of the state. 'One good turn deserves another' was the campaign cry and when the ballots were counted it was found he had been re-elected by a plurality greater than 70,000, the greatest ever given to a gubernatorial candidate in the state.

"Today this man, in the prime of life, courteous, kind and unpretentious, strong, resolute and virile, an orator of unusual power, who has attained honorable distinction by his own industry and effort, whose high character and winning personality compel the love of his friends and the respect of his political opponents—this man, innocent of the allurement of great wealth, who has not been swayed from the path of duty nor fascinated by the power given into his hands nor dazzled by greater honors placed before him, never unmindful that as a public officer he is the servant of the people and bound by every obligation of duty and honor to strive to advance their interests, is the ideal candidate of this great party for president of the United States.

"For the first time Minnesota offers to the Democratic party a candidate for the presidency, a man who has been tried and found not wanting. It offers you its best loved citizen. It offers you the governor who has twice led the way to victory, a leader stalwart and pure, strong and brave, able and sincere, a true Democrat, faithful to the teachings of the fathers, understanding the needs of the day, devoted to the good and the right. For nomination for the presidency of the United States, Minnesota presents the name of John A. Johnson."

OFFERS GRAY'S NAME

Hon. Levin Irving Handy of Delaware Describes the Qualifications of the Judge.

In placing the name of George Gray of New Jersey before the Democratic national convention for president Hon. Levin Irving Handy, of Delaware, said:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention:—I have a duty to perform placed upon me by the Democracy of the state from which I come. In the performance of that duty my heart leaps with pleasure. Because of his ability, because of his patriotism, because of the maturity of his judgment, because of his devotion to true Democratic principles, because of the width and depth of his experience in governmental affairs, and because of his devotion to justice and to the Constitution, the man who is best fitted to perform the duties of president of the United States is (George Gray). As a general rule the man best fitted for the place is most available for the nomination.

"If you are to nominate a man because he is eager to be president, you will not name Judge Gray. There are other candidates who want this nomination more than he does. This man is as modest as he is great. Ambition is the last weakness of great minds, and ambition is the greatest danger the people have to fear in rulers. George Gray is a public servant without personal ambition. In this he is like our first and greatest president. If you are to nominate the man who you personally love the best, perhaps you may nominate some other candidate; for I am not unmindful of the personal devotion which delegates here present cherish for other candidates. But the question we are now to decide is too important to our party and our country to be decided because of personal preferences.

"The Republican party has been in power too long. The government has grown corrupt, extravagant and autocratic, and the prosperity of the people has taken upon itself wings and flown away. Free institutions exist in order that at such a time as this the country may peacefully change its rulers and change its policies.

"Entering on a political campaign in which victory or defeat means so much, we are now to select the political chieftain who shall carry our banner and marshal our forces. If the country were in a great war in which a decisive battle was to be fought and the duty fell upon me to choose the general who should command our country's army in the field, I would not dare to put in command the general whom I loved the best nor the one who was the most eager. Neither would you. The responsibility would be overwhelming to choose the soldier whose genius for war, shown by his record and experience, gave the best prospect of winning victory. You would not hesitate to refuse promotion and opportunity to your own brother if there were available another soldier who gave greater promise of winning the fight.

"In like spirit I ask you to put aside all personal preferences, and to choose calmly and prudently the Democrat who can most surely win a Democratic victory in November. Possibly any one of the candidates suggested may be able to win at the polls. I hope so. But our plain duty is to nominate not a candidate who may win but the candidate who can most surely win. We contend for too great a prize to take any unnecessary chances of defeat.

"Our candidate must be one who can command the support of our party and at the same time attract the support of independent citizens who are not strict party men. We may as well face the fact that a majority vote in this country is always made up of the party vote reinforced by the votes of a large body of independent citizens. Hence a successful candidate for president must do more than hold the loyalty of his partisans. He must in addition command the confidence and win the support of people who care nothing for party. Party opinion is a great thing and must be considered, but public opinion is a greater thing and must be obeyed. Nominate George Gray and public opinion will say that we have proposed a man whose intellectual and moral stature towers to the standard set by the greatest and wisest presidents in our history.

"George Gray's life has been one long and unselfish service of the people in high places. Attorney-General of his state, a great senator of the United States for many years, a treaty-maker for the nation, the most successful arbitrator of disputes between labor and capital who ever lived, and now in his later years a great and learned judge, his merit has won the confidence and good will of the whole people.

"In the Senate he was ever in the forefront of weighty debate, championing with eloquent logic the principles of Democracy. In making the treaty with Spain he was the one commissioner who stood true to the doctrine of human liberty and protested against taking the Philippines and strapping imperialism upon the shoulders of the Republic. In settling the anthracite coal strike he demonstrated his sympathy with the toiling masses of his fellow countrymen. His just and unflinching courage led him forever to organized labor. It justifies me in applying to him the ancient description of an upright judge. 'He put on righteousness and it clothed him; his judgment was a robe and a diadem; and he brake the jaws of the wicked and plucked the spoil out of his teeth.' Such has been the quality of his life-long service, and he stands in its white light approved of the people.

"George Gray is a moderate, not a violent man. With him as president justice and prudence will walk hand in hand, and peace will be restored between man and man throughout our borders. He is sound, not sensational, and with him as president we shall have rest from turmoil so that prosperity may come again. The country needs a rest. Honest enterprise and honest toil need a chance to attend to their own business; and George Gray is no meddler and can be happy when he is not engaged in a fight. If we want industrial prosperity we must establish and maintain industrial peace.

"This man has the temperament, the love of justice, and the firmness of principle to correct abuses without disordering and wrecking the affairs of the people. He will brake the jaws of the wicked and pluck the spoil out of their teeth; but he will know how to destroy the beasts of prey without belaboring all of the domestic animals. He will stop predatory wealth from depredations without terrorizing honest and industrious wealth. He is progressive, not revolutionary, constitutional, not autocratic, practical, not visionary.

"George Gray is not only the man best fitted to be president, but he is also a Democrat we can most surely elect president. He will be an acceptable candidate in every part of our broad country. Surely he will be peculiarly satisfactory to the people of the southern states where we must look for that ever-faithful body of electoral votes which constitutes the backbone of our strength. His great and successful fight in the senate against the Force Bill opened the safe pathway down which those states have walked to shelter from the black storm which threatened their civilization. How rejoiced would southern men be to see once more in the White House a president who understands and appreciates the southern man's point of view!

"As to the group of states on the Atlantic seaboard—Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia—there is no doubt that George Gray is far and away the strongest candidate that can be named. After all, those are the states in which our great political battle must be fought and won or lost. When did the Democratic party ever come within hailing distance of victory without carrying those states? It would be wanton recklessness to plan a campaign which abandoned the chance of carrying those old-time Democratic states in the delusive hope of making good the loss in other portions of the field.

"Delaware is a small state, but it is sometimes given to small people to perform great services. In offering George Gray as your presidential candidate Delaware is offering a great service to the party and the country. Small as she is, Delaware is entitled to a full measure of state pride, but this nomination is not suggested by state pride. She is acting not to gratify her great though unambitious son nor yet to minister to her own glory. Rising to the heights of patriotism, animated solely by a desire to contribute to the welfare of the whole country, without a spark of animosity towards the other candidates, Delaware offers a name entwined with victory, a man who is every inch a Democrat, a man whose every blood-drop carries love of country. On behalf of Delaware, in accordance with her instructions and in her name, I nominate George Gray as a candidate for President of the United States."

loyal sons of the North Star State responded with a cheer and a number of delegates in Massachusetts and Oklahoma joined in. A liberal amount of applause came down the galleries, but the noise was but a whisper compared with the terrific roar of the Bryan demonstration.

Chairman Clayton was somewhat less tolerant in dealing with the Johnson shouters than he had been with the Bryan followers and commenced to rap for order while Minnesota was still on its chairs and in the flood-tide of enthusiasm. The band also failed to respond to Johnson's name and sat silent in their places, much to the wrath of the Minnesota delegation, who sent to Chairman Clayton a complaint of partiality. The chairman promptly signalled the band, which played two airs. This seemed to satisfy the Minnesota delegation, and the demonstration had largely subsided within 12 minutes after it began.

While the Johnson cheers were slowly dying and the chairman was struggling with the disorderly galleries, L. Irving Handy of Delaware, was waiting on the rostrum to name as a presidential candidate George Gray of his state.

When Mr. Handy had spoken for a few minutes he was interrupted by the appearance of the long-awaited committee on resolutions. The seats reserved for the committee on the platform had long been filled and there was considerable delay and much confusion before the spectators could vacate the chairs and surrender them to the committee.

After the resolutions committee had been provided with seats Mr. Handy proceeded with his speech. He asked the delegates to give him close attention, as an offset to the difficulty of his position in being cut short by the committee's appearance. The request was greeted with general applause.

There were calls of "time, time" from the galleries and Mr. Handy jumped at the erroneous conclusion that they came from some of the delegates. His ire was aroused and in a second, he changed from oratorical to conversational English.

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded fiercely of the delegates. "What has become of your spirit of fair play? I have not spoken one quarter as long as the gentleman from Nebraska nor one third as long as the gentleman from Minnesota and you call 'time' on me. I am offering you the best proposition you'll get and I want you to listen to it."

Cheers greeted his remarks and Mr. Handy with liberal encouragement from the delegates he had unjustly scolded resumed his speech.

"Why heed the cry of passion when prudence beckons you on to victory?" demanded Mr. Handy when another interruption came from the galleries—Chairman Clayton pounded for order.

"Hurrah for Bryan," came from a spectator.

"Oh! Shut up in the galleries," shouted the speaker who then speedily brought his address to a close.

Some of the evening was heard when Mr. Handy had concluded, but there was no attempt at a Gray demonstration.

"Gentlemen of the convention," said the chairman, "I now have the pleasure of presenting to you the chairman of the committee on resolutions, Governor Haskell of Oklahoma."

The governor called forth loud cheers from the convention when he announced that there was no division among the members of the committee and that he represented them all, in present and in future.

The platform was adopted without a dissenting vote.

MLLE. LEJRE

Has Recovered From Her Accident at Buckeye Lake in "The Sinner's snail of Death."

MLLE. Edna Lejre did not attempt her ride on the "Sinner's snail of death" Thursday night, her manager, Mr. Repp, having secured Mr. Earl Leroy of Columbus, who accompanied him last season on the tour with the Hagenbeck circus, to make the ride. The young man has ridden the trip many times and made a pretty exhibition Thursday night, which was witnessed by a large throng of visitors, including MLLE. Lejre herself, who seems to be suffering very little from her experience of Wednesday evening.

Manager Repp was seen by an Advocate representative Thursday evening, and stated that MLLE. Lejre was not so badly injured as had been reported. The mechanism, which many believe to be a "loop the loop" contrivance, is entirely different in construction from any apparatus of the kind used in the incline on which the car runs in this section, so arranged that at a certain moment a tray is sprung which sends the auto in mid air, at a height of only about 10 feet from the ground, where it turns a complete circle, falling on a spring-mounted landing runway from which it glided out onto level ground. The occupant of the car is strapped securely in a throne-like seat and knows of no hold on the "dumb" machine. It is the hand held on the steering wheel which keeps the car from pitching forward in the excitement of the car strikes the spring and it some times does, when the car is due to her relaxing her hold on this brace that MLLE. Lejre was seen Wednesday evening. Manager Repp denies that she was unconscious when a hypodermic injection was given her by the attending physician, Dr. E. C. Brown, of the Hagenbeck circus, on the ground, watching her fall from the accident, he stated. The manager admits, however, that the young woman bled profusely from her nose, owing to the fact that her face was bumped against the brace wheel when she relaxed her hold. He said that the bump was a hard one, and that she might suffer with a headache for a couple of days, but would ride again before the week is out.

It is understood that several of the resort cottagers were much excited over the seeming cruelty of the act, and threatened to get up a petition to the park management, protesting against the woman making the ride. Manager Repp learned of this and sent for Mr. Leroy to be substituted for the young woman.

MLLE. Lejre is said to be Miss Carrie Melton, or Miss Lohr, of Michigan avenue, Columbus, a modest, but daring young woman.

ADDRESS

Delivered on Independence Day at Effingham, Ill., by Former Licking County Resident.

The Effingham Morning Record, a newspaper published at Effingham, Ill., contains a full report of a stirring patriotic address delivered near that place on Independence Day by a former Licking county man, "Uncle John" Sliger, whose home is now in Effingham, but who has many relatives in Newark and Licking county.

Mr. Sliger lived in Illinois for several years and will be remembered as one of Licking county's foremost horse dealers a few years ago.

The speech, which was delivered to a large congregation of neighbors at Edgewood, near Effingham, is a gem. The speaker noted the growth of the country in liberty of thought and speech, and lauded its patriots of former years in a style of oratory that was appreciated highly and roundly applauded.

ORDERS

Received by Conway for Violin for Noted Columbus Musician—Frustrating Good Instruments.

Mr. Conway, the violin maker, is feeling good over a nice lot of orders brought in by Prof. Reginald Hidden, a prominent musician of Columbus, who endorses heartily the instrument that Mr. Conway turns out. The order consists of three high class instruments, one of which goes to an artist in New York city. Considering the value of such violins, and the painstaking work required to produce a really first class instrument, this order is a large one, and will keep Mr. Conway busy for the next four months.

The Conway violin is getting very well known, and is now in the hands of many musicians of note, and is one of the productions that widely advertises Newark.

Mr. Conway with his experience in producing better instruments each time that he turns one out, and he speaks highly of the knowledge of the construction of the violin of Mr. Herbert Lyon, the veteran music master of this city, of whom Mr. Conway learned a great part of his art.
